

‘A Jaipur tale of Root, Stem, Leaf, Bark, Fruit and Flower’, named after the majestic Aravallis.

Before Jaipur became a city of palaces, it was a land of medicinal forests, mineral-rich soil, and nomadic apothecaries.

Tucked away in a forgotten garden at the foothills of the Aravallis, the House of Vaid, a guild of Rajasthani botanical healers, once preserved the ancient knowledge of plants. They believed that each part of a plant had a role in human experience: roots for grounding, bark for strength, stems for resilience, leaves for clarity, flowers for joy, fruits for indulgence, and seeds for legacy.

The bar is inspired by this mythical Royal Conservatory, a space where rituals of flavour, healing, and celebration were crafted using native ingredients from the desert and the hills.

Every drink and dish here tells the story of an ingredient, from its origin to its transformation.
